The Scotch Coast, off Anstruther. Anstruther, in Fifeshire, is a closely-packed and red-roofed fishing town, rising directly from the water's edge, with a green and well-wooded country behind it. It was the birthplace, in 1780, of the Rev. Thomas Chalmers, D.D. Six miles south was, at it is the Island of Man, whose lighthouse is the only one in Scotland lighted by electricity.
